"chacarron is a song about a young man who searching to learn his sexuality and needs to journey far and wide to find the true meaning of love. He has just lost his mother to cancer, and he sets out on his quest with a heavy burden to bear. Along the way he meets new friends, some strippers, and some enemies. His quest takes him all the way to istanbul where he finds his long lost biological father, a clock maker, who teaches him the true meaning of sexuality through their intimate, late night, encounters. When the man departs to share his knowledge with the world, his father leaves him with one last teaching to ponder. "life is like a clock; sometimes it goes tick, and sometimes it goes tock. So you can never be too sure about what's going to bukadandudan bukadandando bukadandudan. Na chaccaron bukabandado bukadangago. Eyakudo badabidakon butabutadon beatdapadadatina chaccaron budadadukai benna dudaflow. Ebedo bada biko dudaflow. " and this is the true meaning of chacarron. "

This song explains the meaning of life. If you put this man in a voice decoder machine (I'm the man eyyyyyy el mundoooo) he tells you the meaning of life, we got some girls to lure him in but the plan backfired and I guess he was lucky but then someone pointed a gun at his fathers face and he said the whole freaking song and then he wanted to sing it.

This song is about a man who journeys far and wide to find his son and pass on the ancient language of his clan: Bukadandunan. He tries and tries, only to fail in the end. So he sets out to find his son via the media and as he lay on his death bed his son found him. The two conversed for hours on end in their native tongue until his father closed his eyes and slowly died with. His son, who had also been searching for his father since he was eighteen, began crying over his father's limp and lifeless body before crying out one last utterance of "CHACARRON!"
